A WHISEY CASE. - We never knew until now there was any harm to make "good" whisky, but such seems to be the case. Temperance lecturers have denounced the spurious article in unmeasured terms, but here comes the inexorable United States Government and finds fault because the whisky is better than it ought to be. The following case is stated by the Pittsburg Dispatch, of the 3d:

It appears that Gibsen & Son, owners of a distillery some distance up the Monongahela, claimed to be the largest in the United States, having for some time been sending out whisky many degrees above proof—or, more plainly, of a better quality than they are taxed for. This has given rise to no little business jealousy among other distillers. who, paying taxes exactly according to the different qualities of liquor manu-factured, do not like to have a conpetitor enjoying such advantages as it is claimed accrue to Gibson & Son. The Government authorities at Cincinnati and Baltimore were apprised of the fact, and seizure of this particular brand of whisky was instituted, but the Gibson firm pleaded that the article accorded with specifications until stored in the bonded warehouse, in whose heated atmosphere the water evaporated and left the proportion of alcohol greater than it would otherwise be. Notice was a few days ago given to Collector Davis, of this district, that a firm known as Miller & Force, engaged in the liquor trade in this city, had ten barrels of the liquor on hand as consignees, and Mr. Davis seized it. Mr. Swoope filled a libel against it, upon which a motion has been duly issued. Mr. S. takes no stock in the evaporation theory, but admits the possibility of the operation of certain chemical principles through which the oaken barrel, being charred to a sufficient degree, might absorb the water to an extent adequate to leaving the remnant liquids in their present illegal condition
